CARTE POSTALE — POSTKARTE

Whitby Harbour is not so busy a place as it was in the days when the ship in which Captain Cook circumnavigated the world was built on the waterside here, near the house where the Captain served as apprentice. Whitby has a large fishing population, and some vessels are still built on its quays, but the whale-fishing has deserted the town altogether. The cobles shown are sharp-bottomed boats, carry three men, and do not go so far out to sea as the "fivemen-boats," which generally carry two cobles aboard.
